An important part of Cymetrix's business is providing HIM-related solutions to assist healthcare clients drive efficiency and performance. Providers are often turning to HIM outsourcing partnerships due to the challenges of an industry-wide shortage of qualified professionals, in addition to the burden of preparing for the transition from ICD-9 to ICD-10. Cymetrix will be able to help providers avoid these challenges by importing necessary documents from their clients' host systems, or by scanning them directly into the ECM and CDI solutions from Streamline Health. Cymetrix coders will use a single, consistent and robust platform for every facility, providing more flexibility in reporting and immediate access to electronically stored documents that will improve coder performance.

Cymetrix will also implement Streamline Health's CAC solution to further improve the speed and accuracy of coding. Computer assisted coding is considered a key technology in helping providers prepare for ICD-10 and the dramatic increase in codes and specificity that they will be expected to employ.

"Speed and accuracy of coding will be critical in the transition to ICD-10 later this year and will have a direct and dramatic impact on healthcare organizations' revenues," said Robert E. Watson, President and Chief Executive Officer, Streamline Health. "Our ECM, CDI and CAC solutions will help Cymetrix increase coding efficiency and improve processes, which should be a huge benefit to both Cymetrix and their healthcare clients."

"We are excited to begin using Streamline Health's solutions to enhance and expand our HIM capabilities," stated Michael Halberda, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, Cymetrix. "This partnership is further testament to our commitment to providing our clients with innovative revenue cycle solutions that significantly improve net revenue and reduce cost."
